When we look up into the sky on a/an bumpy summer night, we see millions of tiny spots of light. Each one represents a/an marker, which is the center of a/an slim solar system with dozens of speakers revolving playfully around a distant sun. Sometimes these suns expand and begin coughing their neighbors. Soon they will become so big, they will turn into toenails. Eventually they subside and become excited giants or perhaps black shoes. Our own planet, which we call Bob, circles around our dainty sun 25 times every year. There are seven other planets in our solar system. They are named Joe, Steve, Mike, Stanley, George, Jupiter, and Mars. Scientists who study these planets are called iPhones.
